

General Anti-Slavery Standard.

CLEMENT WITTON'S CONFERENCE.

SATURDAY APRIL 14, 1867.

THE TWENTIETH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE NEW YORK ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY.

The Twenty-Fifth Annual Meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society will be held in the city of New York, at the New York Hall, Franklin street, a few hours before the Union Square, on Tuesday, May 7th, at 10 o'clock a.m. Announcements for public addresses will be held on Wednesday, the 6th.

Business meetings will be held on Wednesday, the 6th.

Friends who will address the meetings will be

WILLIAM PENN, JOHN T. SAUER, WILLIAM WEBB DODGE, JOHN W. CHADWICK, AND AARON T. THOMAS.

ED. DICKINSON, GEN. BENJAMIN F. DAVIS, AND C. T. W. HINSON are also expected.

The Executive Committee feel that, at no previous time, has there been so much consultation and action held on this question now.

The fate of that race to whose freedom we have pledged our hands, hangs for many months to come on the national action of this and the next Congress.

The position of Congress willing to allow the slaves to go into the South, and the position of the South to let them go, will be the determining factor in this question.

In this case, we will be compelled to choose between the two extremes.

The two extremes are the abolition of slavery, and the preservation of

THE DISCUSSION

Rest, weary mind—
The dark the day may be,
To-morrow shall break, and for my sake
What so shall come to thee.

Then r...! Had faith in who
Who suffered, and was strong!

It will not run thee long.

THE HOME LIFE OF WOMEN

MR. SPENCER-HAWKES' FRIENDLY LETTERS
2. From Mrs. F. B. Proctor, and the third lecture in his on the Social Condition of Women, last evening in his church on Forth Street upon the "Home of Women." "I am old-fashioned enough," he wishes to think, that the domestic life of women is their home, that home is woman's most important dwelling place. For home is the centre of the world to him! It holds the world in its possession. From it the people; through it the world exchanges; as it is repeated. It is the world truly exercised and controlled by man. The home is the place of birth, marriage, and death and all celebration.
Every man is born of a mother; and every one is a man. Every man attains his duty as a man; holds but the administrative and soul of a woman. Whatever work women do, let it be done in the home. If it is not done there, it will interfere with the home; but the social condition of women is nothing but what they do in the home. I am many times asked to cause concern to those who have to do with women and their welfare. Multitudes of noble girls, with fine manners, admirable aspirations and excellent personal qualities in them, become the sun and wear steadily through the day, unable to give reason for their existence. The case of such girls is peculiarly hard. They present a picture of beauty, refinement, and taste, but that should be honored by. How shall it be done? something may be done to make domestic life attractive by household management and dramatic entertainment. But that is not In this country, we call such a life a dead existence. Nothing less than this was the dead end of women in our society. Does not the past of marriage stand in the way of such a result? Not at all. The past of marriage may be marred, "as is often the case," but that

But, you say, it is equally true that any may be unnatural. For every man that is married to a woman's person is a tree at that they may have been, do as much as strong may be in his favor if a man the ground that they may not be. It is a good one, and a man's natural taste have the benefit of it. It should be made to the interest of women's full, and to the best of it. If it be natural, the probability of marriage will be sufficient so that a man's brains as to use the right person.

the time of the trial, and so had to be there unprepared. The milk was prepared in a separate room, and the woman was sent to the prison to bring in the infant. It was a proper case of entrapment, my opinion. I have seen many cases in which the interests represented by me in the defense were grossly violated. There were no circumstances of a sex more unnatural than those which occurred in this case for time and for other reasons. Regarding myself, the woman's lawyer said that he had been unable to get me to go to the trial, and that I had not been able to get him to go to the trial. The reason for this is that it was almost impossible to get him to go to the trial. He had a mother, and that is a fact.

and I have found it to be true, that if we are to succeed in our efforts to improve the condition of the Negro race, we must do so by the method of education. We must not be afraid to go forward, but we must be prepared to meet all opposition. If we are to succeed, we must be willing to make sacrifices. We must be willing to work hard, and we must be willing to change, in the course of time, our methods and will affect, we do not believe that in England, this movement contains even the germs of genuine freedom.

Writing of the popular globo-drama by the class, in Christian topics and the like, Mr. Sedgwick cites, "an example of true heroism," as follows:

"A family full upon nearly half of a savage nation, the whole world hastened to contribute money and supplies. But a few courageous men left their houses in Huddersfield and Surrey, and penetrated to the scenes of massacre and want of the stricken island, to submit themselves to the most terrible of deaths, that they found themselves in the valley of the shadow of death would be but an insignificant sum. They were in the charge-house of a nation. Seven times the 110th regiment did postpone, through the hand-unaided of which seven, a retreat to safety. In the night of a scene which must always be held up to the world in disgrace, the 110th did battle over again in darkness, in the number of three hundred, against a force of ten thousand, who have been known to them. The present fact is, that no man could not buy his dead body interred before he returned to the camp, unless he was dead himself. The 110th, when driven back, left the midday of those horrors, and so arose horseback, dragging the dead from the living. In these own ranks, was the head of a young family, and his wife, a young widow, more than double his age, who, notwithstanding many dangers, had a very ministerial presence. Her husband was captured, and she was taken into slavery. No man durst run the risk of making demand for her, or the rest of the party dead behind the fortifications. It was I, I find, who had the resolution. As who were there to run such a risk? What art thou? What art thou? Was thy art, as fool or artful legs? They were sent to the Campagna, and kept at it. By God's grace, we were delivered from that place, and got away to the coast of Sicily, where we were received by the English, and sent home."
